AI & Private Equity StarPoint Properties Los Angeles, CA

StarPoint Properties is seeking a highly motivated intern to join them at the cutting edge of AI adoption in private equity real estate. This is not a research role — you will be building and deploying real agentic systems in a live business environment, working directly alongside our CEO and Head of AI.

This role is based in our Los Angeles office in Beverly Hills.

What You'll Do

- Design, build, and deploy AI agent systems to automate and optimize firm-wide workflows
- Work hands-on with tools including Claude, agentic frameworks, and LLM APIs
- Collaborate directly with senior leadership on identifying and executing high-impact automation opportunities
- Contribute to the firm's broader AI adoption strategy across deal execution and reporting

What We're Looking For

- Currently pursuing a degree in Computer Science or a related technical field
- Demonstrated experience building with AI tools, Claude, and/or agentic systems
- Genuine interest in the intersection of AI, private equity, and commercial real estate
- Entrepreneurial mindset — you want to build novel systems, not just use existing ones
- Strong communication skills and ability to work cross-functionally with a lean team

To Apply, please email Zach Sheinberg directly at zachs@umich.edu with a brief statement of interest, why you would be a good fit for the role, your resume, and your available schedule.

You were trained to shape cities, buildings, and thriving places. You went into this work because you wanted to make things better. Somewhere between school and practice, ambitions got narrower, the projects got more constrained, and the systems that you work within proved stiff.

Just about every other sector has experienced significant productivity growth, but the built environment fields lag behind. New entrants with business school backgrounds and venture capital are coming for parts of the value chain that architects, planners, and developers have always owned. Clients are asking for impacts that most firms have no framework to guarantee. Technology is accelerating in ways that will not wait for the profession to catch up.

If you've been sitting with a growing sense that something is fundamentally broken, you're not wrong. And you're not alone. This 6-week online course was built for practitioners who are done waiting for someone else to figure it out.

Registration: $1200

Enrollment is limited.
